

Spring: New Beginnings

Through the darkest of days and the coldest of dawns,
Hope comes our way as a new life is born.
A bud of belief, a petal of joy,
It tried, but our humanity it could not destroy.
As the leaves start to uncurl and the blossoms bloom,
We can feel ourselves emerging from our tomb.
Like a butterfly wakes and spreads it's wings,
This is our chance to erase negatives that cling:
Cling to our lives like the ivy on a tree,
Envelop us, suffocate us, stop us from being free.
This is our chance for a new way of living,
We've united under a rainbow, now let's unite in our giving:
Of love, so much stronger,
Of a cwtch, so much longer,
Of a laugh, so much louder,
Of a smile, so much prouder.
Let's put others first, let's offer our aid,
Let's stop pulling people down and the negatives will fade.
This is our chance to plant the seeds of a future,
With less selfish actions and a more thoughtful culture.
We must never forget the past, for without it we can't grow,
But we look forward to the summer and forward we will go.
Together we can make the change, together we will pass,
Our new beginning is full of hope and hope will always last.

Katie Cueto